Where The Problem Lies

Where The Problem Lies

Every day serves to bring home more and more forcibly to the farmest at Westiera Canada the incontrovertible fact that their inferents are bound ap with the interests of other countries and peoples, and that the solution are the common problems in Canada is not wholly a matter of domestic population of the west many, and it is to be based with the surround of the wheat roop of the West may, and it is to be based with result in the surround of a somewhat better price by the farmer, because it slands to reason that one control of the west may, and it is to be based with result in the surround of a somewhat better price by the farmer, because it slands to reason that one control of the west may, and it is to be based with the what crop of the West may, and it is to be based with the what crop of the west may, and it is to be based of farmers and average for themselves seeling individually, and to some extent in competition with each other. But the more the Canadian farmer studies the situation, the more convinced he is that he cannot individually, or even collectively control the price of wheat. On the contrary, experience teached that world conditions, are the determining factor, and arithmight the Canadian people may do can only affect the price to a comparatively small extent.

The deal stitution with each other. But the more the Canadian farmer studies that world conditions, are the determining factor, and arithmight the Canadian people may do can only affect the price to a comparatively small extent.

The data world will even exceed that amount. But the 28,060,000 people are 5,000 miles wary in Europe, and the other lines were producted and the present time. He politically of England to buy Canadia wheat is seriously cursilled.

In this world situation is to be found Western Canada's fundamental problem is to be found in Europe, and until the tanget there is interested Mr. Dunning. It links every quarter section of Western Canada hand with the great world problem. Conditions in the Rut son or the most approved methods to increase, not his acreage, but the yield per acre.

It costs just as much in freight charges to transport one hundred pounds of veed seeds from the pratries to the terminals at the head of the Great Lakes as it does to transport one hundred pounds of grain, and to the extent that the farmer ships, weed seed, laistend of grain be to robbing himself or profit. Furthermore, land producing large quantities of weeds will not at the same time produce a large yield of grain per acre. The Western Canadian farmer will be much farther shead and much better off if, instead of trying to devise some means of controlling the world's price of wheat—which he cannot do—be derotes his energies to controlling the weeds on his own farm and shep clean grain instead of a combination of grain and weed seeds, something which it is within his power to control.

Until conditions are stabilized in Europe the Western farmer will likewise be well advised if he practices all the little economies he can. Never at any time in the world's history was it truer than it is today that a penny saved is a penny earned.

With the development of the wheat shipment via the Pacific coast trade the need of an interior elevator at Edmonton has become vital, as the cleaning facilities are necessary in order that farmers in the Edmonton district may be able to ship their grain via Vancouver. Additional elevator facilities are also being provided at Vancouver for the handling of grain at that port, and next year, it is expected, the amount of grain shipped via the Pacific route will show a tremendous lincrease over the amount handled this fall.

Except for the additional facilities planned at Vancouver, this will be the only elevator construction undertaken by the government in the west during the next year.
